A few years ago, a late spring storm hit earlier than the forecast predicted one day. We were all out of our house, and our dog, Shadow, was home alone. By the time my husband got home after the storm, a neighbor’s trampoline was wrapped around a tree across the street and there had been some nasty, wind damage to trees in town. The storm had passed but the damage was done. Shadow, who had been inside when we left, was soaking wet and waiting on our deck for one of us to let him back into the house. He had jumped out of an open window to the ground eight feet below. We were very lucky that he didn’t get outside and just keep running, because he was so scared. Many dogs do and end up lost, miles away from home. I went online that night and ordered a “Thundershirt.”

A Thundershirt is a ‘swaddle’ made for a dog’s body. It is touted to work on all kinds of canine anxiety – separation anxiety, storms, fireworks, vacuum cleaners – anything that wigs your dog out of his fur. It is a heavy jersey ‘shirt’ that you Velcro with three flaps snugly to your animal’s body. That’s it. The manufacturer is so confident of their product that they offer a 100% money back guarantee for up to 45 days after having it. And I must say, it really seemed to ‘do the trick’. Shadow is obviously still aware of the thunder, but he stops trembling, pacing and panting once the shirt is on him. He is able to manage better, just from the comfort of the snug embrace of the shirt. It is amazing in its simplicity. It really is not that much different than front packs and slings for infants. When placed in those even the most colicky of babies will often be soothed by that body-hugging comfort. Many remedies for anxiety or stress in animals and humans alike, have this concept of an embrace at their very core.

This season of the church year that we are in —Pentecost — also has this concept at its core. Pentecost is a time when the community of faith celebrates being blown through by a life-changing wind. The Holy Spirit stirs things up and though it is exhilarating to think about, when it happens the experience often gets us unsettled and sometimes even scared. We are anxious that the church will be changed too much for us to bear. But the remedy lies at the very core of Pentecost and it is the embrace of community. When we see signs of anxiety and offer the supportive ‘hug’ of community to one another, it helps us manage our stress better. When we huddle up and weather the unsettling times, we are calmed from our states of manic activity. This is the other gift of the Spirit -- the Comforter -- the one who brings Christ’s peace to us. And we find it in one another. The Holy Spirit moves through us and between us, changing and comforting. When we offer support to one another in love, it dispels our fears and comforts us so that we can get through life’s changes -- together. Offering an embrace of support can change the way we feel, the way we act and how we perceive each other. It is amazing in its simplicity.

A lot has changed at Lakeview in the last six months. We are asking congregation members to step outside of their comfort zone and lead worship twice a month, while I am leading at Glenwood. Some of you might be feeling a little anxious with all of this change.

I urge you, in the midst of it all, to remember that the Spirit is circulating in these winds of change, that Jesus promised his disciples that he would never leave them “comfortless”, and that the embrace of your brothers and sisters in Christ will offer us peace through it all.

The Prodding and Peace of Christ’s Spirit Be With You,
Staci
From the Ecumenical Officer

August 2018

The last two months I have not written anything for this column, because my plate has been pretty full. On February 18 my wife, Susan, went to hospital with a pain that led to minor surgery on February 23. A series of complications, including a stroke while in recovery, led to her remaining in hospital or rehab just short of thirteen weeks and then coming home May 18.

Our son, age forty-eight, after a fourteen-month struggle with cancer, died May 20.

Then on April 7, the Saturday after Easter, I had a heart attack. On April 9 I underwent triple-bypass surgery, and on April 15 I came home.

My purpose in telling this is not to seek sympathy but to celebrate the support that friends, primarily with a church connection, provided in our need. One person scheduled regular visitors to Susan in hospital, so someone was visiting at least every other day. When I was going into surgery, one friend was there with my medical directive, in case it might be necessary in an emergency. Another friend scheduled persons providing some meals for me. When we were both in hospital, someone took our dog for a week. Twice our home was cleaned from top to bottom. Our lawn was mowed several times. Since I could not drive for three weeks after coming home, numerous friends took me to physical therapy or picked me up for a meeting or to run errands. (I could get to Susan in hospital by public transportation.) A friend at a distance still sends me a card—often with some of his own art work—every two weeks or so. After I came home from hospital, for two weeks male friends took turns bringing sleeping bags and spending the night on our living room floor so I would not be alone at night. And I am sure I have forgotten some things.

God made us to care for one another. I believe that the church of Jesus will be alive and growing to the extent that we are caring communities, communities that care for one another and for people in need outside the community. The congregation where we worship, where ninety or so gather on Sunday morning, is now housing and supporting a mother and three children seeking asylum from violence in a Central American nation that led to the murder of the father of the family.

Jesus, our Chief Elder, you cared for the forgotten, the neglected, those who were shut out. Make of us caring persons, and make of us caring congregations, whose life together shows that we belong to you. Amen.

The Unified Board is organizing a clean-up day to get a head start on Fall cleaning at the church. We will invite groups that use our building to help us out, too.

Here are some Fall jobs from Don G’s list that we will be working on that day:

- Wash exteriors of windows.
- Keep gutters clean of leaves, grass clippings. North side, lots of vehicles parked so they collect there. Use mower to pick up leaves or use blower to blow leaves up on terrace and across sidewalk to yard to be chopped or picked up. Clean window wells and stairwells several times during the fall – wash window well windows too.
- Cut down bushes by Office windows, cut down hydrangea and hostas by school entrance, and various other locations around the building.
- Trim bushes as needed, trim Evergreens.
